End Game: An International Conference on Combating Maritime Piracy

Friday, September 6

at Case Western Reserve University School of Law, Cleveland, Ohio

Made possible by a generous grant of the Wolf Family Foundation

For the moment pirate attacks are down, but piracy continues to present a major threat to world shipping. Even with greatly expanded patrolling by international navies and increased use of private security forces, there have been 48 pirate attacks, 448 seamen were held hostage by pirates, and global economic losses due to piracy topped 5 billion dollars in the last twelve months. Meanwhile, renewed political turmoil in Somalia and Yemen is sowing the seeds for a new generation of pirates with increasingly deadly tactics, and piracy is spreading to the west coast of Africa at an alarming rate. This conference brings together two-dozen of the world's foremost counter-piracy experts to analyze the novel legal challenges and options related to this new phase in the fight against piracy.
